

2010 MIDEMNET & MIDEM Conference Programme

23-27 January 2010 – Palais des Festivals, Cannes

New this year!

- MidemNet 2010 Conference is now free!
- Launching MidemNet Lab & MidemNet Academy

MidemNet 2010 Conference Highlights

From Content to Context - Monetising the New Music Experience

Consumers today are experiencing and accessing music in more ways than ever. The music industry is looking for concrete ways to monetise the use of all its assets, from the artists to their music, artwork and live shows. At MidemNet 2010, exclusive keynotes and panels, leading international artists and industry experts will address related key issues, including:

- What practices from current deals between labels and digital services should we keep?
- What can we learn from other content industries?
- How can we monetise the live experience?
- How do we make the most out of mobile applications and social media?
- Does the copyright model need to be updated?

MidemNet Lab - Business Innovations Showcase

The MidemNet Lab shines a spotlight on 15 start-ups that are bringing exciting new digital solutions to the music industry. They are selected through a call for entry managed by Music Ally and picked by the MidemNet Lab judges, 6 highly successful digital and music industry entrepreneurs: Matthew Daniel, VP, R2G/Wa3.cn (China); Daniel Ek, CEO, Spotify (Sweden/UK); Loic Le Meur, Founder & CEO, Seesmic (France/USA); Alexander Ljung, CEO & Founder, SoundCloud (Germany/UK); Ian Rogers, CEO, Topspin (USA); Anthony Volodkin, Founder & CEO, Hype Machine (USA). MIDEM participants will discover these innovative solutions through presentations, video demonstrations and face-to-face meetings

MidemNet Academy - Digital Education Training

As the business of digital becomes much more of a mainstream business concern and encourages more creative thinking, MIDEM has launched MidemNet Academy, the new space to gain concrete, practical skills through courses on digital marketing & business. Attendees will leave the Academy with paper reports/key points/summary related to the courses.

And more speakers to be confirmed

For years now, people have downloaded music without paying, and no industry solution has been universally adopted. Amid a cacophony of discussion about business models, DRM, 3 strike laws and other solutions, one idea continues to gain support: ISP licensing - charging a fee on your ISP or mobile bill for the music and content you download. But how exactly could it work? We will hear from international leading experts on why and whether this could really be implemented.

The seminar will coincide with publication of the 2010 IAEL Book edited by the Chairman with the assistance of Frukt, the team behind Music Intelligence - the monthly industry magazine for music executives.

Including coffee & networking break (at 11.15)

11.00 12.00	MIDEMNET ACADEMY	Effective Monetisation of Music on Mobile In association with Informa Telecoms & Media
----------------	-----------------------------	---

Location – MidemNet Academy, Hall 01

Speaker:

Shailendra Pandey, Senior Analyst, Informa Telecoms & Media (UK)

Every year, the music industry suffers huge losses from piracy and illegal downloads. To minimise these losses and achieve strong growth, the industry needs to look for alternative channels such as mobile, invest in new business models, and come up with attractive services that consumers are willing to pay for. Which mobile business models are working today? Which revenues are they creating for the music industry? This workshop will answer such topics and present facts and figures on the growth of mobile music sales. Bring your questions along and find out what is the likely impact of this trend on the music industry in the coming years.

Moderator:

Panos Panay, Founder & CEO, Sonicbids (USA)

Celebrating Gap stores' 40th anniversary, more than 750 artists & bands played live across all North American Gap stores on the same night, at the same local time. While Gap consumers were invited to the party, Gap store managers chose the in-store talent playing that night. Following the event, employees were given access to a dedicated microsite, to download music from the performing artists and thus "vote" for each artist, who were vying for a chance at a recording agreement with John Alagia. Hear from this campaign's stakeholders about how this music program was effective in engaging consumers, employees and acting as a springboard for new music talent.

Most opera houses and orchestras would like to believe they can become recording labels and even distributors. Few succeed and many will try. But, the fact remains that the landscape of classical music is being played out in the digital media world that impacts both positively and negatively on an artist's career. Whether promoter, presenter or media partner, there are partnerships and models for success but what are the mistakes being made? How realistic is it that an opera house or orchestra embark on producing recordings or even enter the new media world of the internet?
