Follow the links below and listen to the song 'I don't know'. The very first violin notes transport you to Dublin, or somewhere in the County Meath, where Lisa Hannigan was born. Here's a wonderful young Irish singer, with her felted and mellow voice and her touching pop folk tunes. 'Everyone's a little bit in love with Lisa', it's been said. Hannigan's chance meeting with singer-songwriter Damien Rice led to a long period of collaboration and development, from 2001 to 2007, that included Rice's critically acclaimed albums 'O' and '9' and popular songs such as 'Nine Crimes' or 'Volcano'. Lisa Hannigan then collaborated with many artists, like The Frames or Herbie Hancock. And in 2008, she recorded her first solo album, 'Sea Sew', which earned nominations for the Choice Music Prize and the Meteor Music Awards in 2009, and achieved Platinum sales status in Ireland. Go Lisa !
